The Way Forward: Drawing innovation scenarios from LIPSE

Hanna de Vries Erasmus University Rotterdam

LIPSE is an EU-funded project aimed at identifying drivers and barriers of successful social innovation in the public sector, through the study of social innovation and co-creation practices and processes in 11 European countries and 7 policy sectors. The LIPSE roadshow event Learning from Innovation in the Public Sector Environments aims at disseminating the most important evidences of the LIPSE work packages especially highlighting the enabling factors of innovation in the public sector, the related performance measurement system and the risks of doing innovation to create public value.

The scope of the debate is to enable a scholar-practitioner dialogue over relevant topics on innovation in the public sector, giving a complete picture on what has been done so far and drawing the most prominent challenges for the future. The scope of the debate is to enable a peer-to-peer dialogue on relevant topics on innovation in the public sector, providing a complete picture on what has been done so far and drawing the most prominent challenges for the future.

The event will take place during the Bocconi for Government Week 2016, the annual event at Bocconi University where the University opens its doors and shares the expertise of its faculty and research centers on public affairs issues: reforms, institutions and policies.
